

G4S Slavery and Human Trafficking Statement (2024)

This statement is made in accordance with Section 54 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015, for the year ended 31st December 2024. It sets out the steps that we have taken to identify and reduce the risk of modern slavery occurring within our supply chain and business operations.

Commitment and approach

We have a continuing commitment to respect human rights. We seek to use our influence and geographical reach to help improve industry standards, provide decent employment opportunities and promote stable communities around the world.

Everyone at G4S, whether a senior executive or frontline employee, is expected to respect and protect the human rights of the company's employees, the people in our care, those that supply G4S, and those that live and work in the communities in which we operate.

We know that any human rights abuse is completely unacceptable and will not be tolerated under any circumstances.

We recognise that identifying modern slavery and human trafficking risks or practices can be challenging, and understand that no global organisation can be complacent nor have complete certainty that it is not present within its organisation or supply chain.

We have taken action and made positive progress to our systems and controls, but remain dedicated to continual improvement to mitigate the risk of modern slavery and other human rights violations occurring in any of our business operations or supply chains.

At G4S, we utilise a range of information sources to help us identify potential modern slavery risk areas. These include engagement with NGOs and other independent experts such as EcoVadis, UNI the global union, the International Labour Organisation (ILO), and the United Nations Global Compact. As a result, we continue to focus our efforts on mitigating these risks in both our international supply chain and the employment of migrant workers in the Middle East and Asia.

Organisation

G4S has a unique global footprint, with operations across over 100 countries and territories, and is trusted to manage complex security matters for customers across a broad range of government and commercial industry sectors.

We believe that there is no greater purpose than serving and helping safeguard customers, communities, and people around the world.

- Delivering industry-leading security solutions to our customers
- Providing rewarding work for our employees
- Making a positive social and economic contribution to our society
- Building a company that creates significant and sustainable value for our key stakeholders

With its headquarters in the UK, G4S Ltd manages the Allied Universal (International) businesses outside of North America, which chiefly use the G4S brand.

Managing modern slavery risks in the supply chain

We strictly prohibit the use of modern slavery in G4S's supply chain and are committed, together with our suppliers, to operate in an ethical way, respecting international human rights standards, including the prohibition of forced or coerced labour.

There are currently around 40,000 suppliers supporting G4S's worldwide operations, delivering a broad range of goods and services. Our risk assessment process has identified a small number of key categories of procurement spend as having a potentially higher risk of exposure to modern slavery .

- a) Manufacture of electronic equipment and of textiles, such as uniforms.
- b) Non-technical facilities management, such as cleaning, catering and support services.
- c) Temporary labour

Our Supplier Code of Conduct sets out G4S's requirements and expectations with respect to key areas of responsible procurement, including the prevention of modern slavery and human rights violations.

As a contracted minimum, all suppliers to G4S are expected to comply with the principles set out in the Supplier Code of Conduct or to commit to a clear timeline for full implementation within their own organisation, and their associated suppliers and subcontractors.

We have partnered with leading sustainability analytics experts, EcoVadis, to help ensure that our suppliers meet the ethical standards set out in our Supplier Code of Conduct.

The G4S and EcoVadis programme applies to suppliers in high-risk categories. It requires in-scope suppliers to complete an assessment tailored to their industry, size, and location. The assessment covers 21 criteria across the four sustainability themes:

- I. Labour and Human Rights: This criteria covers issues such as child labour, forced labour, discrimination, and health and safety
- II. Ethics: Covering issues such as bribery and anti-corruption practices
- III. Environment: Covering issues such as climate change, pollution, and waste management
- IV. Sustainable Procurement: This criteria covers issues such as ethical sourcing, fair trade, and recycled materials.

The supplier's responses are analysed by EcoVadis, which provides both the supplier and G4S with a detailed report setting out the supplier's sustainability performance. Where their performance does not meet the required levels, a corrective action plan must be submitted to G4S to address any issues raised.

Since its launch, the programme has been implemented in G4S businesses across 22 markets, representing c.75% of G4S procurement spend. Within these markets around 7.5% of suppliers (c.600) have been categorised as potentially high-risk, including manufacturers of electronics and uniforms, providers of cleaning services and temporary labour.

To date, approximately 475 supplier assessments have been completed, representing nearly 80% of in-scope suppliers. We are encouraged that, as we extend the programme into more challenging, developing markets, more than half continue to achieve a satisfactory rating.

We work with those that have not achieved a satisfactory rating, or who declined to take part in the programme, to address any shortfalls or encourage participation. Several companies have failed to fully engage with the programme and have been excluded from our supplier database as a result.

During 2025, we are continuing to expand this programme to cover 95% of in-scope suppliers across the 22 target markets.

In addition, to support the programme, we have:

- A 'G4S Supply Chain Social Principles' guidance and due-diligence toolkit, to help G4S procurement teams provide clarity to suppliers on the social standards expected of them.
- Modern slavery training and guidance available to G4S procurement teams and in-scope suppliers in partnership with EcoVadis.

We reserve the right to audit any of our suppliers and their subcontractors as part of any new contract of supply to confirm that the requirements set out in the Supplier Code are in force. Failure to participate in an EcoVadis assessment or to allow an audit may result in the termination of the related supply contract. If an audit identifies levels of non-compliance with the Supplier Code, the supplier will be required to provide a detailed remedial action plan including timeline to compliance, in order to continue doing business with G4S.

Our business operations and our other policies

Migrant worker welfare and employment practices

G4S is a leading global employer that is committed to the highest standards of employment. This includes ensuring that migrant workers are treated fairly and with dignity and respect.

We ensure that our employment policies and practices are consistent with international conventions, including the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights and the ILO core labour conventions.

For G4S, the employment of migrant labour is necessary in a small number of countries and territories^{1,2}, where we directly employ around 16,500 migrant workers as the availability of local labour is scarce. We know that migrant workers are far from home and potentially vulnerable, and it is critical that we safeguard their welfare and human rights.

Our Migrant Worker Policy framework is based upon good practice principles and applies additional measures covering the use of recruitment agencies, accommodation standards, and clear employment terms and conditions to help protect employees working away from their home country and the legal protections provided by that country.

We are committed to ensuring the human rights of migrant workers are respected, in the same manner as all our employees. Employment must be freely chosen with no use of force, compulsory, bonded, indentured, or child labour. We aim to offer decent work under terms which protect the health and safety of employees and ensure they are treated fairly, and with dignity.

G4S businesses are required to self-assess against our employment standards and human rights controls on a regular basis and report on action to address any gaps.

These are monitored by the Human Resources Department and Head of ESG. The feedback from self-assessment is consolidated to show year on year trends and highlight approaches where more guidance or support may be required.

The self-assessments are supported by compliance reviews by local and regional teams and independently reviewed, on a sample basis, by the internal audit department. Our audit programme covers human rights control measures, alongside other related matters such as labour management and workplace safety. In 2024, five such human rights control audits were carried out in potentially higher-risk countries in Africa and the Middle East.

We continue to apply the Employer Pays Principles, as set out in the Principles of the Leadership Group for Responsible Recruitment within our directly managed businesses where migrant workers are employed.

We encourage and support the external management of G4S Qatar³ to address local challenges and complete implementation of the principle ahead of the LGRR objective date of 2026.

Our Migrant Worker Coordinators (MWC) team, includes Welfare Officers, and other related roles continue to support migrant workers in-country.

During 2024, we continued to conduct face-to-face interviews between migrant worker employees and our MWC. The interviews include checks to verify compliance with our Migrant Worker Policy and to confirm that the employee's experience during their recruitment and employment is consistent with our standards.

The checks cover a range of issues, including:

- a) The use of recruitment agencies and any associated costs being borne by employees in the recruitment process.
- b) Consistency of conditions set out in initial offers with actual terms on arrival in the destination country.
- c) Freedom of movement and any issues that may restrict this, such as the withholding of passports or application of unreasonable notice periods.

Independent of the in-country management, MWC reports directly to Human Resources management and Internal Audit to ensure that migrant worker voices are heard. The MWC has personal experience with the recruitment process and understands the vulnerabilities and anxieties migrant workers often have, so they seek to create an environment in which employees feel safe to share information.

During 2024:

- a) Almost 3,000 face-to-face assurance interviews were held between migrant worker employees and our MWC, representing 18% of the migrant workers employed by G4S.
- b) Supporting face-to-face assurance interviews, we implemented interactive technology solutions, located in migrant worker accommodation facilities. Accessed by QR code, employees in Bahrain, Saudi Arabia, and the UAE can acquire information 24/7, complete survey responses, ask questions to regional management, and register any concerns or issues.

Additionally, like every employee, our migrant worker community has access to Speak Out, G4S' global whistleblowing service.

Other key policies which relate to the prevention of modern slavery are:

Chaired by the Chief HR Officer (International), the Modern Slavery Committee continues to oversee the implementation of our Migrant Worker Policy and standards, and other relevant case reviews.

Our Ethics Code, sets out in detail our expectations of how the company's values and standards should be applied in order to always do business in the right way. Supported by mandatory training programmes for all employees, the Code is inclusive and accessible to all and relevant at every stage of the employee lifecycle.

Our Code, and its accompanying training package, include specific references to human rights matters, including modern slavery and human trafficking.

Our Global Human Rights Policy, and its supporting framework apply to all of the Group's businesses, and defines our commitment to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the UN Guiding Principles on Business & Human Rights and the ILO's Declaration on the Fundamental Rights at Work. They set our approach to human rights, including the responsibility of management regarding ongoing risk assessment, regular control and thematic audits and compliance monitoring.

We regularly review the global human rights environment to generate a heat-map. The 2023 review identified 26 countries, in which G4S has operations, as being potentially high-risk environments for a range of human rights matters. These may include restrictions on civil liberties, high levels of corruption or the local attitude to labour rights and standards. The review's findings are integrated into our risk and compliance processes and may trigger additional levels of assessment and internal audit where necessary.

Our Whistleblowing Policy explains that every G4S colleague has a responsibility to ensure that we uphold our core values, adhere to the law and deliver against the important commitments we set ourselves, including those in our Ethics Code, Human Rights Policy, Supplier Code of Conduct and Human Resources Core Standards.

If colleagues have any concerns that our standards are not being met, we encourage them to use Speak Out (g4s-speakout.com), our global whistleblowing service, to report them.

Concerns can be raised anonymously through Speak Out from most locations (where permitted by law) including those related to human rights. Speak Out is available in multiple languages, at any time of the day or night, by any employee, subcontractor, or third-party such as people we work with. Speak Out is promoted to employees and third parties at onboarding, as well as through employee handbooks, Ethics Code, posters, newsletters and other channels. Retaliation is strictly prohibited and any retaliation against those who Speak Out will be treated as a serious disciplinary offence. All concerns will be taken seriously.

Allied Universal's International Ethics Committee oversees the delivery of our whistleblowing policy and conducts regular reviews of serious cases, investigation progress and resulting actions for G4S. In 2024, a total of 1517 cases were raised via Speak Out (2023: 1,528). Every report is assessed and investigated further where appropriate.
