Due Diligence

The Company will only seek to work with suppliers who share its commitment to preventing slavery and human trafficking.

The Company works closely with its suppliers to understand their activities and seeks relevant information and warranties from them that adequate procedures and practices are in place to manage the risk of human trafficking or slavery in their supply chain.

Each Director and member of the Senior Leadership Team takes responsibility for their relevant area of the business in this regard and ensuring that appropriate due diligence is undertaken in appointing and reviewing supplier relationships. They are also responsible for ensuring that proportionate contractual terms are in place to prevent any human trafficking, slavery or employment practices which do not meet the minimum legal requirements or ethical standards of the Company.

In the event the Company becomes aware of an incident of human trafficking or slavery (or had a suspicion of such) the Company would seek to investigate this further and ensure the situation was rectified as a matter of urgency. As part of rectifying the situation, the Company would give serious consideration to terminating the supplier agreement.

Any incidents of human trafficking or slavery would be reported to the board of directors.
