Modern slavery statement

Prostate Cancer UK is committed to our organisational value of ‘Make It Count’, which requires us to act with high standards that are in the public interest.

We (Prostate Cancer UK and our trading subsidiary Prostate Cancer Trading Ltd) are committed to operating without the exploitation of people, either through modern slavery or human trafficking. This commitment extends to our supply chains and our partners.

This statement is made pursuant to section 54(7) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and constitutes the Prostate Cancer UK slavery and human trafficking statement for the financial year ending 31 March 2025.

Organisation structure and supply chains

Prostate Cancer UK was established to raise money to meet our objects of supporting research into prostate cancer, raising awareness of prostate cancer, and providing support and information to men with prostate cancer and their families.

Prostate Cancer UK is a registered charity in England and Wales (number 1005541) and in Scotland (number SCO39332) and a company registered in England and Wales and limited by guarantee (number 02653887).

The charity operates a wholly owned subsidiary trading company, Prostate Cancer Trading Limited. The company's principal activity is to raise income through sales from our online shop, and to process licensing income derived from our partnerships. Prostate Cancer Trading Limited is registered in England (number 06157784).

We work with a range of suppliers, the majority of whom are based in the United Kingdom and subject to UK law. Some suppliers may provide goods for us to sell, for example through our online shop, or provide products and services for our fundraising events.

Our policy in relation to modern slavery and human trafficking

We published our first modern slavery statement in 2024. It was published on our website and added to the government’s modern slavery statement registry.

Our financial procedures manual covers both Prostate Cancer UK and Prostate Cancer Trading Ltd. It sets out how we control risk, including through our procurement policy, which is informed by our overarching ethical policy and provides a purchasing framework and process to support staff in the selection of suppliers. In addition, we have the following policies to protect the people we work with and those involved in our supply chains: whistleblowing; safeguarding; equal opportunities; equality, diversity and inclusion; health and safety; and code of conduct.

Our due diligence processes, risk assessment and management

When selecting suppliers, we ensure they do not include slavery and human trafficking within their business or their supply chains, in accordance with the Modern Slavery Act 2015. We investigate the Modern Slavery Statements of all significant proposed suppliers as part of our contracting process.

All our partners must confirm that they comply with the relevant UK laws and regulations, as well as good practice, prior to entering into an agreement with the charity.

Our whistleblowing policy ensures that our staff are able to raise any concerns they may have with the way in which our charity operates without fear of victimisation, harassment or disciplinary proceedings.

Risk is reviewed by the Leadership Team on a quarterly basis and our Finance, Risk and Audit Committee provide oversight. The Board receives updates on risk twice a year. As we consider the risk of modern slavery in our supply chains is low, we do not have a specific key performance indicator for modern slavery.

Training

We do not provide specific training for staff about modern slavery, but the modern slavery statement is published on our staff intranet and our procurement policy and contracts checklist, which are shared with members of staff involved in the procurement process, ensure staff are aware of our obligations under current UK legislation.

Our performance

We have received no concerns or reports about modern slavery or human trafficking from our staff, the public, or law enforcement agencies in the year to 31 March 2025.

Approval

This statement is approved by the Board of Trustees and signed on their behalf by Doris Olulode, Chair of the Board of Trustees.
