These standards encompass human rights, environmental compliance, animal welfare, anti-bribery, data privacy, responsible minerals, trade sanctions, and more. This comprehensive approach underscores our commitment to ethical business practices and sustainability throughout our supply chain.

5. Governance and policies for addressing modern slavery

At Sandoz, we are committed to addressing the risks of modern slavery both in our operations and in our supply chains.

Governance

Sandoz has committed to addressing modern slavery and other human rights risks from the top level of the company and has established a clear governance structure to manage and address those risks. Our Chief Executive Officer's endorsement of the Human Rights Commitment Statement exemplifies our commitment to upholding human rights. We assign the accountability for the implementation of this commitment to the General Counsel & Chief Compliance Officer.

A dedicated Human Rights workstream within the Global Legal and Compliance Function is responsible for operationalising Sandoz's human rights strategy (which encompasses forced labour and child labour) throughout global operation. In implementation of the human rights program, they work closely with key functional experts and relevant stakeholders across the company including Legal & Compliance teams, Third Party Risk Management (TPRM), Procurement, SpeakUp Office, People & Organisation (P&O) and Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG). These teams collaborate closely to address human rights and labour rights risks effectively in our own operations and in our supply chain.

Policies

Sandoz has well-established policies, processes and monitoring systems in place to ensure the respect of human rights standards. We expect our business partners, including suppliers and customers, to share this commitment. Sandoz's commitment and principles to respect human rights apply to all Sandoz sites, operating companies, and business activities worldwide. Sandoz's human rights commitments are reflected in the following Sandoz policies and guidelines:

- Sandoz Code of Ethics: In our Code of Ethics, we strongly commit to conduct our business in a manner that respects the rights and dignity of all people.
- Sandoz Human Rights Commitment Statement: As stated in our Human Rights Commitment Statement, in conducting our business, we aim to ensure that all aspects, from development to commercialisation, and from manufacturing to supply chain management, conform to the principles of dignity, equality and fairness. Eliminating modern slavery and any form of forced labour is a key human rights priority in Sandoz's human rights strategy. We strictly prohibit the use of modern slavery including all forms of forced labour or human trafficking. We strive to ensure that everyone who works in our operations and supply chain, regardless of location, is not exposed to suffer modern slavery or any kind of forced labour, and enjoys a safe, respectful, and nurturing work environment.

- Sandoz Third Party Code: Our Third Party Code sets out the standards and expectations, beyond baselines set by law, that we expect our third parties to uphold. It aligns with the industry standards set by the Pharmaceutical Supply Chain Initiative. This code emphasises that any third parties working with Sandoz shall not use any form of modern slavery such as forced labour, child labour or be involved in any form of human trafficking and slavery. It reflects Sandoz's commitment to working and doing business with third parties that respect human rights, labour rights and our ethical standards. It provides for screening, assessment and regular monitoring of our business partners by our Third Party Risk Management Team, in conjunction with our Human Rights Team. The Sandoz Third Party Code sets strict human rights standards, including, but not limited to, the following:
 - Third parties shall not use forced or compulsory labour, including, but not limited to modern slavery, involuntary prison labour, bonded labour, debt servitude, state-imposed forced labour, or engage in any form of labour exploitation and human trafficking. This includes, but is not limited to the following practices:
 - Voluntary Prison Labour. The use of prison labour must be always communicated to Sandoz. It must always be voluntary for the prisoner and in accordance with the standards and guidelines of the International Labour Organisation, in particular ILO Convention No. 29.
 - Workers shall have freedom of movement. Workers are free to leave their jobs after reasonable notice. Workers can freely move to and from their employment or residence at all times and are not controlled by security guards.
 - Retention of identity documents and/or passports is not allowed. Workers are not required to hand over original versions of their personal documents to secure employment, unless permitted or required by local law. In any such event, workers must have access to their documents at all times.
 - Charging recruitment fees and retaining cash deposits is prohibited. Workers do not pay recruitment fees or deposits to secure their job, their employer-provided accommodation, or any training and equipment necessary to carry out their jobs.
 - Third parties must recruit foreign migrant labour responsibly.
 - Third parties shall oversee all steps of the recruitment process and carry out due diligence at every stage of the labour migration process.
 - Third parties shall ensure foreign migrant workers have access to grievance mechanisms in a language they understand, throughout the entire labour migration process, that give effective access to remedy.
 - Third parties shall ensure the safe and dignified return of migrant workers to their countries of origin at any time, without fear of reprisal or penalties and without incurring extraordinary debt.
- Sandoz Internal Global Procurement Guideline This guideline adheres to the principle known as the 'No Go Criteria,' which serves as a red line for Sandoz, indicating that the company will not collaborate with any organisation employing child labour or engaging in other modern slavery-related labour practices.
- SpeakUp Policy: This policy sets out the procedures by which any individual, including Sandoz employees, third party employees, contractors or any other person can report a concern to the Sandoz SpeakUp Office in relation to breaches of our policies, including the Third Party Code and Code of Ethics, laws, and any other inappropriate behaviour. Reports related to forced labour, child labour and other forms of human rights violations in our operations or supply chain can be reported through this grievance mechanism. Our subject matter experts will investigate the allegations and, if substantiated, ensure appropriate measures are taken to address the violation and end or minimise any human rights violations. All allegations received through the SpeakUp channels are taken seriously and resolved through an effective, monitored system.

Identifying and assessing modern slavery risks

At Sandoz, we strive to identify, prevent, and mitigate potential risks and adverse human rights impacts that may be directly linked to our operations, products, services and value chain. We conduct risk analyses in our own operations and in our supply chain. Where appropriate, we take appropriate remedial action to stop and minimise potential risks or adverse impact that may be linked to our operations.

5.1 Third Party Risk Management

According to our internal global procurement policy, Sandoz will only engage in contract relations with a Third Party after a robust and risk-based assessment process was conducted to ensure that the Third Party operates to the same standards as our own. This assessment is conducted by our TPRM team, prior to starting the business relationship and during the entire lifecycle of the contract relationship.

We assess compliance of all suppliers, in line with our Sandoz Third Party Code, specifically with regard to human rights and labour rights risks, including child labour and other serious human rights violations, taking into account their geographic location, industry-specific risks and the nature of the work. We investigate any third parties with negative media coverage, to understand the issue and determine whether corrective action is necessary.

Our TPRM system classifies all suppliers according to human rights and labour rights risks (high, medium or low). This is done through our ongoing risk monitoring of supplier and product categories based on the available country and industry risk database and all information provided and collected by our direct suppliers. Risk monitoring and assessment is carefully evaluated and reviewed annually by labour and human rights experts.

5.2 Human rights risk analysis

In addition to our Third Party Risk Management framework, we systematically analyse our own operations and supply chain to identify and address the risks associated with modern slavery and other human rights. Our assessment considers two key factors: product and service category risk and country-specific risk factors. We have identified certain critical product and service categories where the risk of modern slavery within our supply chains is most pronounced. These categories include:

- Labour Provision via Recruitment Agencies: This involves the use of labour provided by recruitment agencies.
- Real Estate and Facility Services: These services utilise informal, short-term, and low-skilled labour. Examples include catering, maintenance, construction work, and ground maintenance.
- Agricultural Raw Materials: Used in our medicines.
- Packaging Materials: Essential components in our supply chain.
- Transport, Logistics, and Warehousing Services: Crucial for efficient operations.
- Personal Protective Equipment: Ensuring safety for workers.

Our identification process involves analysing sourcing activities using data from diverse sources, including:

- TPRM Framework Findings
- Participation in External Multistakeholder Initiatives: Such as the Human Rights and Labour Subcommittee of the Pharmaceutical Supply Chain Initiative and the Human Rights Working Group of the Business for Social Responsibility Network.

- Publicly Available Sources: These include the U.S. Department of State's annual Trafficking in Persons Report, reports, and resources from organisations like Walk Free Foundation, the Business and Human Rights Resource Centre, and Global Slavery Index and regular media research on emerging modern slavery risks.

6. Risk management, findings and specific actions taken

At Sandoz, we are committed to addressing risks of modern slavery in both our operations and supply chains and taking effective action to mitigate the potential and actual risks of modern slavery. In 2025, we took specific actions to assess the potential risks and implemented appropriate measures as listed below.

TPRM Risk Findings

In 2025, we assessed 175 third parties for labour risks, including child labour, as part of our third-party risk management plan. Among them, 2 cases (third parties) of non-compliance with our standards were identified. To address these issues, we implemented 6 CAPA plans to mitigate the identified gaps. By the end of 2025, we had closed 100% of these CAPAs.

The observed decline in labour and human rights assessments compared to 2024 is attributed to the implementation of our enhanced TPRM operating model in 2025. As part of this transformation, we updated the applicability criteria and adopted a more stringent risk-based methodology. These changes ensure that due-diligence efforts are directed toward suppliers with elevated risk profiles, resulting in fewer—but more targeted and meaningful—assessments.

7. Tracking effectiveness of our actions

Sandoz remains committed to the fight against modern slavery and we seek to continuously improve our approach to tackling modern slavery and rigorously evaluate its effectiveness. Evaluating the effectiveness of our strategy to combat modern slavery serves two crucial purposes: continuous improvement and risk mitigation. By assessing our ability to identify, prevent, and address modern slavery risks, we enhance our overall approach. To gauge our progress, we rely on several key performance indicators (KPIs):

- Supplier Screening: We track the number of suppliers screened for labour rights and human rights compliance.
- Corrective Action Plans: We monitor the implementation and closing of CAPAs related to modern slavery issues and other human right risk.
- Capacity-Building and Pilot Projects: We measure the success of initiatives aimed at building capacity and piloting innovative approaches.
- Employee Training: We track completion rates of human rights related trainings.

Additionally, we actively review complaints raised through our SpeakUp system. This process helps us identify areas for strengthening our human rights strategy.

8. Engagement and training

Engagement and collaboration

Sandoz actively participates in collaborative initiatives within the healthcare sector and across various industries. In the context of our commitment to preventing modern slavery, we hold membership in three key groups:

- Pharmaceutical Supply Chain Initiative (PSCI): As part of PSCI, we endorse the PSCI Principles for Responsible Supply Chain Management. These principles cover a wide spectrum, including human rights, ethics, labour practices, health and safety, environmental sustainability, and related management systems. We have seamlessly integrated these principles into our Third Party Code.

- BSR's Human Rights Working Group: Our involvement in this group allows us to gain cross-industry insights and access best practices related to human rights implementation.
- BSR's Healthcare and Human Rights Forum: Through this forum, we collaborate with other pharmaceutical companies and other companies in the healthcare sector on how to address potential human rights risks in the industry.

Through these collaborations, we strive to enhance our efforts in modern slavery prevention and continually strengthen our approach.

Training and capacity building

During 2025 all employees undertook training on our Code of Ethics, which emphasises our ethical commitment to human rights including the prohibition of child labour, forced labour and other human and labour rights.

9. Grievance mechanism and remediation

Our risk management programs are supported by our SpeakUp grievance mechanism through which potential violations relating to modern slavery or other human rights and legal standards can be reported. Not only are our employees required to do so, but also our suppliers, their employees and other external stakeholders can report potential misconduct that is not in line with our Human Rights Commitment and the Third Party Code.

Reports can be submitted via our web platform or via telephone to an independent external service provider. Reports can also be submitted to any country president or manager, any member of the People & Organisation Team, our Legal and Compliance Team, the Global Data Protection Officer, Corporate Security, or other functions, as may be appropriate. Contribution to a SpeakUp case, either as a reporter or witness, is covered by our Non-Retaliation Policy, which grants protection to everyone contributing to a SpeakUp case. We take all reports seriously and will follow up appropriately with our well-trained experts.

If an investigation into a report is substantiated, we implement remedial actions and sanctions, if necessary. A root-cause analysis is part of the investigation and used to define the appropriate remedial actions. Remedial actions resulting from investigations are subject to appropriate monitoring.

The SpeakUp reporting tool makes it easy for both employees and external parties to raise concerns and it also allows anonymous reports. It enables effective reporting, case management and contributes to an efficient monitoring of reported allegations of human rights violations.

10. Consultation with reporting entities

This statement was developed in consultation with the reporting entities and members of the key functions at the national and global level including the Management, Legal and Compliance, TPRM, Procurement, SpeakUp Office, P&O, ESG, among others.
