

Our Commitment

The Children's Society's (TCS) mission is to overturn the damaging decline in children's wellbeing, setting a path for long lasting growth.

We recognise that modern slavery is a global significant human rights issue that includes human trafficking, sexual exploitation, forced and bonded labour, domestic servitude, and child labour. We are committed to acting ethically and with integrity in our relationships by taking every reasonable opportunity to act within our direct operations and wider sphere of influence to ensure that slavery and human trafficking is not taking place in the charity's operations.

This statement is made pursuant to section 54 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015. It constitutes The Children's Society's anti-slavery and human trafficking policy statement for the financial year ending on 31 March 2025. It covers the activities of The Church of England Children's Society (trading as The Children's Society) and its wholly owned subsidiaries: The Children's Society (Trading) Limited and The Children's Society (Services) Limited.

The Charity's structure

The Children's Society is a company limited by guarantee and a charity registered in England and Wales. Our organisation was established in 1881 with the principal objective to care for and support children and young people in need.

The Trustee Board has the responsibility for the governance and strategic direction of the Charity. The operational management is delegated by the Trustees to the Executive Leadership Team, which is accountable to the Trustee Board for its stewardship of the Charity.

Assessing modern slavery risks in our supply chains and other areas

Modern slavery is hard to detect and is often hidden in plain sight. By its nature, we recognise that there are risks of modern slavery in our supply chains for all types of goods and services. The risk of modern slavery in our operations is considered low due to its relatively small-scale supply chains with the controls and systems that we have in place to manage its supply chain and recruitment. However, a risk does remain nonetheless, and so the policies and procedures outlined below help us mitigate this, to the point that we are satisfied that we are compliant with the Modern Slavery Act 2015.

Our strategic areas of focus include working to prevent and disrupt child exploitation, abuse, and trafficking. Given our work, it is certain that we encounter situations of modern slavery and as a result, our policies and procedures such as safeguarding, whistleblowing and safer recruitment are critical underpinnings of a robust, safe and ethical response.

Our policies and practices for the prevention and mitigation of human trafficking and modern slavery, including steps taken in 2024/25:

Service Delivery impacting young people

We delivered change through a blended model of training and direct intervention, providing learning sessions, resources, communication materials and wider support to prevent and disrupt child exploitation, abuse, and modern slavery through our Home Office commissioned national Prevention Programme. Our national #Look Closer public awareness campaign continued to focus on improving the public and business sector's understanding of child exploitation and modern slavery and their role in spotting and reporting concerns.

The Children's Society Prevention programme continued to work in partnership across the private, public and third sectors to improve awareness of, and responses to modern child slavery. This included work with the police, social care, health professionals, children's homes, schools, transport companies and many others. This year, the Programme focused in particular on improving awareness and practice within the banking and finance sector and within nighttime economy businesses such as hotels, taxis and fast food outlets.

The Programme also made a significant contribution to ensuring greater recognition of child financial exploitation, including in the context of fraud and money laundering - which recognises that this activity is a form of modern slavery. This included:

- Training hundreds of frontline and strategic professionals on the issue,
- Supporting Ofsted to begin incorporating financial into their inspection approach,
- Working with the Home Office to develop the first ever guidance on financial exploitation for staff working with young people and;
- Representing the UK at the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's (OECD) global money week launch event to encourage international finance leads to recognise 'money muling' as child abuse and a form of modern slavery.

We also continued to work to improve practice regarding missing and exploited refugee and migrant children through developing and publishing new best practice guidance on the issue, in partnership with Missing People.

During the year, The Children's Society delivered several different services that either worked with children who were being/at risk of being exploited or supported systems change in statutory services that impacted young people being exploited. These services worked with thousands of young people directly and thousands of professionals through our systems change work.

The services supporting young people who experienced instances of exploitation that fall within the scope of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 are explained in Appendix 1 to this Statement.

Safeguarding

The Children's Society is committed to safeguarding and protecting the children and adults that we work with. We ensure that we have a range of policies and procedures in place which promote safeguarding and safe working practice across the organisation.

We have clear procedures on working with children and adults at risk of exploitation and trafficking.

Within the last year we have:

- Ensured that all new starters to TCS complete an online learning module on risks within the community, which covers contextual risks within the community including modern day slavery.
- Worked in partnership across our delivery to ensure collaborative responses to exploitation and risk, including modern slavery when we encounter it.

Purchasing and supply chains

The Charity's Procurement Policy outlines our ethical procurement approach and sets out our principles and practices for the acquisition of goods and services. We have integrated modern slavery provisions and due diligence into the Charity's contracting processes. The Charity has a purchase order system to ensure that staff make purchases, other than small expenses, using established processes. This is being monitored by the finance transaction team.

We continuously review and seek to mitigate risks in relation to suppliers who operate in areas where there may be modern slavery risks in the supply chain. This includes those who support the procurement of goods and materials for our fundraising and marketing activities and goods and materials for sale in our network of charity shops, particularly where those goods and materials are acquired from suppliers in other countries.

Fundraising

The Charity accepts philanthropic donations and corporate funding from a wide range of sources. With due diligence procedures, we mitigate the risk that sources of potential funding could be linked to unethical or illegal activity, including exploitation (either directly to the prospective donor, or as an underlying source of funding for the donation). The Charity operates a due diligence process, gift acceptance policy, screens potential donations in excess of £5,000 for a number of factors, which includes any potential connection to modern slavery. Where due diligence checks indicate a significant issue or concern, the case will be passed to the Board of Trustees for review.

People

Our People policies set out workplace rights and new recruits (staff and volunteers) are screened around their right to work in the UK as part of our robust safer recruitment process (and guided by policy). Where it is necessary to hire agency workers or contractors, our staff are directed to vetted agencies that meet our selection criteria regarding their employment policies and practices. The Charity's pay structure is underpinned by the Living Wage Foundation, which means that staff are paid a real living wage. The Charity implements its own Whistleblowing Policy regarding concerns about potential corruption, fraud, and other unlawful practices within the Charity. If a case of modern slavery were to be suspected, this would be fully investigated, and appropriate action would be taken.

Within 2024/2025, we:

- Continuously improved the supplier onboarding process, by reviewing compliance requirements and educating TCS staff on supply chain due diligence.
- Continued to provide advice and guidance to those teams who have direct responsibility for relevant supply chains and to build awareness of modern slavery risk across our core teams.
- Conducted supply chain due diligence within our Retail operations.
- Ensured high risk supplier contracts include modern slavery obligations.
- Remained committed to only working with Trader Recycling Universal Standard (TRUST) accredited Rag Merchants within the Retail operation. The independent TRUST audit, renewed every two-years, ensures all staff have the legal right to work, that they are paid at least the national minimum wage and are provided with a contract.
- Developed the modern slavery risk management process flow, including sending out a Risk Assurance of Supply Assessment to our key suppliers.
- Updated and refreshed the questions around Modern Slavery within the online Supplier Questionnaire which is completed by all our direct suppliers. The questionnaire covers their governance, policies, training, and supply chain management processes.

Action plan for the next financial year

In 2025/2026, in addition to continuing the work outlined above, we will:

- Include modern slavery as part of a review of our procurement policy and procedures and partnering due diligence, processes, and policies.
- Include modern slavery key performance indicators and figures as part of a wider range of reportable statistics.
- In line with our new Procurement 'BuyingStation' we will require suppliers to attach an in-date Modern Slavery Policy which can be reviewed by the contract owner and budget approver. Furthermore, 7 days prior to a supplier's Modern Slavery Policy expiring, a notification will be sent to the supplier and contract owner. The supplier will be expected to attach an updated Modern Slavery Statement. Contract owner notifications allows for intervention by the contract owner if required. All suppliers will be added to the BuyingStation and via spend analysis, the Procurement team will priorities the addition of suppliers flagged as high risk of modern slavery.

- Provide training sessions/drop-in sessions focused on Procurement Policy and best practice as well as focused sessions on Modern Slavery internally at TCS.

Publication

A copy of this statement, a full copy of the Act and a simplified overview is accessible to all employees electronically on The Children's Society's Intranet. If anyone has concerns that modern slavery or human trafficking is taking place in our organisation or supply chain, they should raise their concerns through the Charity's Whistleblowing Policy or to the Company Secretary.

This statement will be reviewed annually and published accordingly by The Children's Society on its website.
