

Introduction

Fortem cares about ensuring that its supply chain is free from modern slavery. We know that slavery, servitude, forced labour and human trafficking is a growing issue and that no sector or industry can consider itself immune or untainted.

Our business

We are a national property solutions provider operating in England and Wales. Our main services consist of Repairs & Maintenance, Capital Works and Retrofit. Our contracts range from specialist projects to strategic long-term repairs and maintenance contracts. Our clients are predominantly local authorities and residential social landlords, although we operate in many other sectors too. We have a large directly employed trade workforce which means that the welfare of the majority of those who deliver our services is under our direct care.

Our supply chain

Our primary supply chain consists of building trade and construction sub-contract partners as well as materials vendors. Our sub-contracting ranges from highly skilled services to semi-skilled labour. We develop and maintain strong long-term relationships with our supply chain and predominantly contract with small to medium sized businesses. We have risk assessed our supply chain, consultants and labour agencies. Our use of agency labour is tightly controlled centrally through a small panel of suppliers.

Policies

We publish our Modern Slavery Policy on our website, which sets out our zero tolerance approach to modern slavery and identifies related policies.

Contractual controls

We impose contractual controls on our supply chain and operate a Supply Chain Code of Conduct which makes clear the expectation that we have of our supply chain in relation to preventing modern slavery. We use a range of measures to vet our supply chains, including ConstructionLine.

Training

We operate in an environment which already requires vigilance to safeguarding and security concerns. We have built on this through delivering specific training on modern slavery, from our induction process through to toolbox talks, and programmes for our management and online training.
