

Modern slavery statement

At Elbrook Cash & Carry Ltd we have a long-standing commitment to protecting human rights in the UK. We welcomed the introduction of the Modern Slavery Act in 2020 and are committed to providing an open and honest account of what we're doing to prevent modern slavery in our supply chains and business.

Human rights matter. Modern slavery is incredibly hard to eradicate, we are all too aware how difficult it is to uncover, and during turbulent times this can be even harder. Labour shortages leading to more people moving around the globe makes exploitation a particular risk.

We want everyone to be aware of the risks of modern slavery, to not be afraid to speak out if they uncover issues, and to have faith that we will deal with them responsibly. It's when we come together and co-operate on issues like this that we see what is truly possible through collaboration.

Modern slavery is a tough issue to address but doing so is absolutely the right thing to do.

There will always be more we can and will do. I'm grateful to my colleagues who work tirelessly to ensure we're doing the right thing and to create the right environment for us to continue to address this issue.
