

Which?'s anti-slavery statement

This statement is for the financial year ended 30 June 2026.

Which? takes a zero tolerance approach to slavery and human trafficking. Our modern slavery statement is issued in accordance with the Modern Slavery Act 2015. It sets out the steps we have taken in the year to 30 June 2026 to ensure that modern slavery and human trafficking do not take place in our organisation and to minimise the risk that they take place in our supply chains. These steps taken are monitored on a regular basis.

Our organisation's structure, business and supply chains

Which? is the trading name of the Consumers' Association and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Which? Limited. Which? Limited generates income for the Consumers' Association through subscriptions, partnerships and businesses whose products or services earn our endorsements and can, for a fee, use our name to promote them.

Which? is the UK's consumer champion. Based in the UK, we're a not for-profit organisation that makes life simpler, fairer and safer for UK consumers. We primarily operate within the areas of publishing, endorsements and the provision of consumer advice and guidance, including through our money and legal helplines. We consider the majority of sectors that we operate in and our supply chains to be at a lower risk of modern slavery and human trafficking.

Our policies in relation to slavery and human trafficking

Procurement policy and procedures

Our internal policies require us to assess the risk profile of new suppliers and to put clear arrangements in place with them. Our Procurement team is responsible for implementing and managing procurement-related policy and procedure and our Supplier and Service Managers are responsible for monitoring and minimising the modern slavery risk associated with their suppliers. Our zero tolerance approach is communicated through our standard contract terms or in an added term for non-standard contracts and our Supplier Code of Conduct, which encourages suppliers to apply the same standards across their supply chains. Moving beyond compliance procedures, we actively encourage our significant and higher risk suppliers to implement transparent grievance mechanisms ensuring both their direct and related workers at all levels have confidential and safe channels to raise concerns without fear of reprisal.

Internal people-management related policies

The Chief Financial Officer is our appointed individual responsible for overseeing the communication of the anti-slavery and anti-human trafficking message, both within the organisation and within our supply chains. We periodically communicate our zero-tolerance approach to our colleagues and all employees designated as responsible for managing a supplier are required to annually undertake mandatory anti-slavery training.

This statement is also shared with colleagues, and our Safeguarding and Whistleblowing policies make reference to modern slavery requirements. Which?'s Equity, Diversity and Inclusion strategy promotes a culture that embraces difference and makes everyone feel included and psychologically safe. Colleagues can raise concerns confidentially and anonymously if they wish through our independent and confidential whistleblowing process and through our regular employee engagement surveys.

Which? is accredited by the living wage foundation and is committed to paying a wage that meets the cost of living in line with the terms set by the foundation.

Risk assessment and management

Since the UK's Modern Slavery Act came into force in October 2015, we have continued to undertake annual reviews to ensure we comply with it. The most recent risk assessment involving desk-based research and supplier questionnaires was performed in July 2026 by our Group Risk team in collaboration with the Procurement, People, Internal Communications and Workplace Experience departments. Our highest priority risk area, for which we carry out additional due diligence and monitoring, is suppliers in higher risk industries. We have a small number of suppliers in this category, operating in the printing, cleaning and maintenance, building security, hospitality, logistics, construction and healthcare industries.

We believe that our exposure to modern slavery risks has not increased during the year, and furthermore note that no breaches of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 were reported during the financial year ended 30 June 2026.

Our supply chain due diligence

Geographically, our supply chains are predominantly based in the UK, although some suppliers also operate internationally. Where suppliers operate within industries and/or countries with a higher risk of slavery and human trafficking, they are subject to additional due diligence and monitoring procedures.

Training about slavery and human trafficking available to our colleagues

All employees are expected to complete Modern Slavery Act training when they join Which? and annually confirm their understanding of our whistleblowing arrangements. Supplier and Service Managers who are responsible for managing supplier relationships are also required to complete annual refresher training on modern slavery.

Monitoring and evaluation

In order to track the overall effectiveness of our measures to eradicate modern slavery in our business and supply chain, we continue to review the performance of a set of Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) that were identified last year. The KPIs have been set by the Group Risk team in collaboration with other departments and are reviewed each year by the Group Risk team. Their relevancy and usefulness are considered as part of the annual review.

 This statement is made by the Consumers' Association and Which? Limited, and approved by each organisation's governing body on 24 September 2026.*

Harry Gaskell

Chair of the Council of Trustees and the Which? Limited Board

September 2026